Q: String Value Won't Insert into PHP MySQL I'm very new to PHP, so I apologize in advance for the dumb questions. I want to insert a string into a MySQL database, and the string is to look like: After setting up the database, I want to insert values: $sql = "INSERT INTO Users (username, email) VALUES (".$_POST['username']."," .$_POST['email']."')"; if ($sql) { echo "Record inserted successfully"; } I've put this into a form, so the string I want to insert should be this: Username: fred I've also set the username and email on the db as fred and fred@email.com respectively, but it says "Record not updated successfully". A: PHP does not handle your web requests. Your web server does that. So... it sends POST data on the request, and you catch it with the $_POST array. But that is on the server. When you finally go into the php script, it is already too late. The data is on the $_POST array, but you cannot execute SQL statements on them. Just try to replace the content of the $_POST array with your values, and you should see some message on the php page or the website. For example with this code: print_r($_POST); print_r($_GET); It will give you information on the values passed by the client. If you see that your data is not in $_POST, but in $_GET, the database is not involved, and that's why it is not updating. A: If you want to execute such statements (set statement) on client, use AJAX. The process would be: Client enters data into a form Server-side, PHP looks for a query in database that matches client-sourced data The query is executed by MySQL server If there is any data sent back to PHP, it creates a JSON string and echoes to client The client processes the JSON string from server and lets browser pass it to client client gets the string and processes it, passing it

Q: WordPress and Facebook plugin I installed the Facebook plugin that is provided by wordpress.com. How can I force the following feature? login with facebook. This is the plug-in that provides me the facebook login feature. ';" data-width="250" data-max-rows="1" data-show-faces="false" data-header="true" data-auto-logout-link="false"> I would like to have in place when the user will login with the facebook my little "callback_url" as soon as the user is logged in. I know the this should be done with PHP so I can add this in my theme functions.php file. I would like to make the site/theme compatible with other sites by this Facebook plugin. A: The Facebook Login button can be added to a page via the plugin which already uses a PHP Facebook Javascript. First add the following code to your page to call a PHP file:
