Category:Adobe Premiere Pro Category:Video editing software Category:Video editing software for macOSHappy Birthday Herman's Hermits If it were not for Herman's Hermits' song "I'm in Love With a Girl" a half-century ago, there would be no "Monty Python." The song came in the second episode, "What Have We Learned Today?," in September 1970. Since then, there have been seven more "monty movies." The history of the Pythons goes beyond that. Without "I'm in Love With a Girl," there might not be David, John, Terry or Graham. Without "I'm in Love With a Girl," there would be no "Monty Python," because it was the first Python movie that was released. When I was a child, I hated the song, and there was one line that really annoyed me: "Every time I look up to the sky it's blue, not blue, and blue." It was a line that I overheard many times from the other children who'd annoyed me. I was very disturbed. The next day my mother purchased a CD of the song. She told me to listen to it the way children do, not the way adults do. I couldn't get it out of my head. I had to find out who these fabulous guys were, and why they were so cool. I had to know their secret. As far as I'm concerned, they should all be siblings. It was something to do with their hair. Their hair, the way it
