Last question before I'm done with the gadgets are you able to put a UIPickerView and a label on a sidebar gadget? Thanks again. A: The gadget you have is a side-panel list, not a side-panel-panel. Think of it like this - you can stick a list of gadgets on your UI screen, or a panel of gadgets on the screen. The difference is fairly clear - you can have a panel of gadgets, and a sidebar panel of gadgets, but you cannot have a panel of a panel of gadgets, or you'll end up getting an empty panel. I'd recommend trying this out for yourself, but it will be of no use to you if you have a panel with no gadgets in it. Q: Django with json I'm working on a project in Django for a school, and I got to the task to make the program more smart (robots). I use for this a Python-library AutoAssist and for the best result also a robot / driver as a "middleman". I noticed that my View doesn't send JSON to the browser, but it sends HTML. The pycharm IDE seems to detect it and gives me some errors where it means that "code and HttpResponse should be separate". This is my code: @csrf_exempt def Store(request): print request.POST if request.method == 'POST': if 'SerialNo' in request.POST: SerialNo = request.POST.get('SerialNo', None) if SerialNo and not SerialNo.isnumeric(): raise HttpResponseBadRequest() document = AutoAssist.AutoAssist.load_doc(SerialNo) driver = Robot.driver query= "%s" % SerialNo try:
