All the options that are available are very self-explanatory, but you can also use the record timer, which gives you the ability to set it up for 30, 45, or 60 seconds. Using this timer is useful since it can be shared with others, making the screen capture process easier for them to complete. In terms of video quality, there are four options, namely VGA, Pass-through, Screenshot, and System Default. VGA is the default setting and is the highest quality, while Pass-through offers a lower-quality level.
