File formats AutoCAD supports a number of different file formats. These include.dwg, AutoCAD LT's native file format, including AutoCAD LT File Export, AutoCAD LT's native drawing template. There are also import and export routines for AI, DXF, SVG, PLY, AutoCAD MapInfo TAB and PDF. The object-data schema files (.dwd or.dwds) are used to define and communicate data definitions and objects between applications. In earlier releases, these were read-only as the AutoCAD database stores the schema information. Since AutoCAD 2012, AutoCAD also supports standard export of DWG and DXF files for use in other software products that can read these. Language The AutoCAD suite supports the AutoLISP programming language. AutoCAD can be opened as a Windows command window or AutoLISP command window. AutoLISP is a native Windows COM scripting language. With AutoCAD LT, AutoLISP commands have been extended with the ability to access file attributes. AutoLISP commands can be written in AutoLISP or in Visual LISP, or as Visual LISP scripts. Visual LISP is a full-featured scripting language that supports many of the basic AutoLISP functions and offers extended language constructs. In AutoCAD LT 2016, AutoLISP commands have been integrated into the ModelBuilder tool and there are new programming features available in Visual LISP. The AutoCAD ObjectARX API is accessible through Visual Studio and includes a number of components and features, including an object model, dynamic automation and a set of toolboxes and components, some of which are available to use as controls. Visual Basic for Applications (VBA) is a proprietary scripting language built in AutoCAD since AutoCAD 2003 for the creation of custom automation. VBA is accessed from the Ribbon (a UI component in AutoCAD) or from code. AutoCAD LT for Mac 2011 supports command-line automation as well as full object-oriented programming capabilities in Macromode. In AutoCAD LT, Macromode and Visual LISP, commands and functions may be called in the form of a "function call". In VBA, the expression is a "macro". AutoLISP AutoLISP is Sb5f913d15
