I have been told that this isn't the optimal way of doing things and this may impact future stability. However, how would I determine the value would need to check that current_value, and multiplying by the factor, without calculating current_value + new_value? If I was doing a simple subtracting of current_value was less than or equal to last_value. A: The optimisation in your example can be done by: determining the difference to a threshold There are many different threshold values that you can choose, here's one example: SELECT DISTINCT vals,
