Epidemiological evidence has suggested that hypertension, smoking, obesity and diabetes are important risk factors for ischaemic heart disease. However, few studies have prospectively examined the association of vascular risk factors with the development of ischaemic heart disease in a community-based setting. A cohort study of 1105 men and 473 women aged 38-49 years was conducted to examine the associations of hypertension, diabetes, hyperlipidaemia, smoking and obesity with the incidence of first-ever myocardial infarction or stroke. Self-administered questionnaires were used to assess the prevalence of these vascular risk factors. Subjects at baseline were followed for a mean (+/- SD) duration of 5.1+/-2.4 years. During the follow-up period, 26 men and nine women had myocardial infarction, and 70 men and 15 women had stroke. As compared with the lowest quintile of baseline LDL cholesterol, a multivariate-adjusted Cox proportional hazards regression model demonstrated significant associations of the highest
