This Letter describes the first use of a field emitter (FE) as a sensitive electron-beam (e-beam) probe to investigate the profile of electron-beam-generated nanopatterns. The e-beam probe was used to create a profile of a 30-nm-thick-nanostructure target on a silicon substrate.

A diagram showing the positional relationship of the FE to the substrate is presented in order to confirm the precise position where the FE is located.Q: What does the $ sign mean in the "Address Field" field in the "Send feedback" drop-down list? The "Address Field" field in the "Send feedback" drop-down list in the "Manage" > "Roles" panel has a $-sign next to it. What does this mean? A: Based on the wording it is a shortcut to the entry field in the corresponding section of the settings. The Global Map Entry field refers to the section in the settings for the corresponding section of the Global Map. So for the Contact entry field there is one entry field and one Global Map Entry field. The Global Map Entry field has a $-sign next to it.
