Whilst this may be the case, it doesn't mean that you'll get to go head to head against one of the world's best when FIFA 22 rolls out later this year. EA Sports has confirmed that this year's version of FIFA will be based on the "rebooted" Frostbite engine. Frostbite has also been confirmed as the engine that will power "Need for Speed Rivals" later this year. "On top of the goal of recreating the feeling and play of the sport, the Frostbite engine allows us to deliver an entirely new experience in a whole host of ways, from weapons and motions to more realistic collision and gameplay," "Football Manager 2015" Producer Craig Duncan told PCGamesN. "This year, FIFA's engine is a true reboot. Built from the ground up to power the entire game, FIFA is going to be a step forward for everyone. The Frostbite engine is perfect for creating the full-scale, hyper-detailed environments that we're going to be using to bring our players into the game. "At this point, we're going to be focusing on our action-based campaigns, and we'd love to have a version of the game that can be played on a split screen." About the Author Matt is one of the hosts of the Between The Lines podcast, and also Wretched TV. He has been working as a journalist for a number of years, with work appearing in publications such as Classic FM Magazine, Here is Music and the official BBC World Service music magazine. He is also a regular contributor to events such as the IncMusic conference and Love To Read Week.
