The key includes your name, an e-mail address and a custom passphrase. You can use PortablePGP Portable Edition to encrypt a locally stored file, as well as ASCII-encrypt a text of your choice. The output file is saved to a user-defined location, while the generated PGP message is displayed in a separate window, enabling you to copy it to the clipboard or export it to a text file. The same operations are necessary when decrypting a text or a file: you have to load the desired file or paste the PGP message, press the 'Decrypt' button and wait for the application to finish the procedure. Once the entered passphrase is verified by the application, the original text is displayed within a new window.
