Well, it's just as easy to forget the name of your favorite. A recovered memory is highly compressed. Farewell, Mr. G in all his misshapen glory I am always astonished to note the diversity of "crappy"-related information on the Web. There are lots of lists of quick get-go solutions to get rid of the variety of what you might call "crappy." There is a site for straightening out the jagged edges and "dead" sites that probably arrived that way, plus a few stories on doing something proactive to get rid of thinning hair. But most of the attention is given to lists of "crappy-fixers." That is, until today. It just doesn't seem fair to you, does it? The crusty Mr. G, probably the world's worst-looking human being who nonetheless keeps his job, was on the funeral home set this week and allowed the cameras to record his final moments. You may recall that last year Mr. G was fired for a fatal accident. He reportedly was in a car being towed away from the funeral home when it began to shake. The driver of the truck hit a curb and the car flipped over, pinning Mr. G under it. He suffered multiple fractures and internal injuries, and was declared brain-dead. I really don't need to tell you about the sentimental value of the man who took such a unique job but was surely incompetent to do so. And I don't really need to point out how frustratingly easy to turn a perfectly good man's last days into a long "reality"

This function is turned off by default since there is no need for compression for GIF images. In the advanced editing functions, the image is also automatically recompressed if needed. Nonetheless, if compression is turned off you can manually set the compression method in the image settings. The available options are: GIF_QUALITY - "Sharp" compresses more than "Original": allows the graphic to be softened to reduce file size, but reduces quality. GIF_QUALITY_MAX - allows "Original" or "Super Sharp" to be selected. GIF_QUALITY_HIGH - allows the graphic to be hardened to produce a more crisp, sharp image. The default value is "Original".

Q: Django meu form não puxa os campos da view

Minha primeira vez com o Django foi simples, criei o model, view e template, pronto. Tentei editar o formulário de um objeto(minha view) e nada. Meu formulario não está ativando os campos (que é o que eu preciso desenvolver mais no que se refere ao formulário):

views.py def add_post(request, *args, kwargs): post = Post.objects.filter(status=1) form = PostForm(request.POST or None) ... # Mesma lógica que a view principal forms.py class PostForm(forms.ModelForm): group = forms.ModelChoiceField(queryset=Group.objects.all(), label='Grupo', widget=forms.ModelSelect(attrs={'class':'form-control'})) .... def __init__(self, *args, kwargs): self.fields['group'].queryset = Group.objects.filter( group=self.fields['group'].queryset, client=self.fields['client'].queryset,
