Like an object that I can access from any function in my application. What is the best way to do that in AngularJS? A: There's 2 approaches you could take, Create a service, by having your data held in a variable the service can be shared between multiple components. Use the rootScope object, this variable is the same as the $rootScope. You can add functionality such as service, timers and events to this. In my experience its better to use the rootScope method. Example of how you would use the rootScope : angular.module('myApp', []).run(function($rootScope) { $rootScope.myData = {key: 'value'}; }); And then you would access it like so : angular.module('myApp').controller('MyController', function($scope) { $scope.data = $rootScope.myData; }); The Police in North Jersey Move into Bunkers Check your Water Damage. It's a rare occurrence but what about an emergency? Many people let their word go for serious water damage and they forget to check with a professional.
