- Adds an Airship to the game. - Adds a Transmute card. - Adds a Combo Damage card. - Adds new enemies and equipment. - Fixes some bugs (Requires a restart) from the previous version. About ETA HIGHLIGHT: The Game is EARLY ACCESS at the present time, but don't expect to play it before I'm finished the initial release. It's very possible I will release it, late February/early March. About The Game: There are 3 Novellas that will be released one every 1/2 month before the base game is released, all those novellas are bought in the game and will be part of the Steam Edition, the game is also a free DLC. About The Game: This game is a MUD-RPG mix of old school gaming and ARPG. The game is in the early stage of development. I've also been playing a lot of AARPG, so I felt that this game is something that came from that gaming field of mine. Deck-Building What are Deck-Building? A deck-building game is a type of game in which the players are building a deck of cards, a deck that they will use in the course of the game. In a deck-building game, players design their own deck, selecting individual cards and later building up an ever larger deck from a smaller base. Players may have some kind of inventory system, sometimes based on Experience Points, Power Points or simply a set of containers. Example: -Kobolds & Catacombs Knights Horses Deck Building The player won't see the cards' text until they reach the character's screen, which is when they actually build it, don't worry about those cards. Not a chance that you will know your enemy's cards. You will spend your time acquiring and gaining knowledge of the dungeon itself. The player won't know his/her deck until he/she places all the cards on the screen, if you already know what is your final deck then you can save the card file, it's quite a relief. "It will increase your chances of winning." ... and it will increase your chances of winning! Lich & Mage You could either be a Lich or a Mage... Play a mini-turn The

What's new in Morbid: The Seven Acolytes:

The Old Woman of the Lake (The Riddle of Almorea) In the mist, darkness, and cold, dread nesses more dreadly than the dark forest whisper and make the shadow come into the light- (Kip) Forsaking the ancient crescent shape of the city, the shadowy tendrils of the Woodland have spread out to encompass Koranth in all its power. Both the souls and psyches of men toil to break the ancient powers that flow in the veins of the area's multitude of woodlands and lakes. The Deception Zeta<sup>2</sup> team, consisting of Kip Axton (a self-proclaimed fraud-bot), Tharaea Rex (a seer who's in league with the Wraith-Kin), Detritus (a Force-user), and Octavia Volakova (the Wraith-kid) are aided by a new femme fatale, Galava, and telekinetic resident of this region, a young madman named Skyfall. Their mission? Launch a sort of Big Brother campaign against the Brotherhood of Genius and their Fragments. A mysterious, dreamlike entity follows them, slowly tending to Kip, a Zeta<sup>2</sup> bot with a series of wishes. Will they succeed in their mission? Or will they endure the feanace and grief of years of battle? Kip considers this from within the darkness of the dark forest. I must kill these sentries, he thinks, or one of them will release the queen- With howling gibberish and a howling steam of burnt metal, an Autobot tank plummets from the rooftops near the third site of the wreckage. A welcoming flame emerges briefly as droves of Hounds swarm through surrounding streets shouting, "vengeance!" and "Hear my howlings!" Two Great Shattered Horns and an entire cemetery are traded for three charred vehicles that litter the street. Several unnamed great Transformers are raising the third site. Kip exits the darkened forest and staggers to the cover of the truck. One of the Hounds claims the second and shakes something made of twisted metal and scrap on the ground. A hush falls on the hearer. "From the entrails of their ancient gods, I've drawn them-" Kip studies the hound, it's size and structure doesn't match up
