The UBC-made Autodesk-related C++ code is called Avtodraw and it is intended for use as plug-ins. History Autodesk was first founded in 1982 by engineers Larry Abramson and Mark Koenig to create a computerized drawing system. A major product, AutoCAD, was developed and released in 1987. The first version of AutoCAD was created in 1982 and sold as the "AutoCAD Drawing System". This was a completely custom product written by Mark Koenig. Later, it was marketed as AutoCAD and, in 1987, as AutoCAD 2D. In 1987, Larry Abramson left to become VP and general manager of the Alias Products division of Macromedia, and Mark Koenig decided to take AutoCAD public. In 1988 Autodesk went public with a $15 million dollar offering that raised $32.5 million. The first shareholder was Larry Abramson's former employer, Autonetics, which had 15% of the shares in the IPO. In 1990, Autodesk (then named Data Design Corp.) was renamed to Autodesk, Inc. At that time, the company moved into a building. In 1992, Autodesk acquired SketchBook Pro, a product developed by a company named Visual FX that was founded in the mid-1980s by George Rhodes, who is also co-founder of the company Picture This. After the acquisition Autodesk continued to develop the SketchBook software as Autodesk SketchBook Pro. In 2013, Autodesk discontinued Autodesk SketchBook Pro and incorporated the technology into AutoCAD. In 1998, Autodesk acquired Alias Intergraph, the maker of Alias's SpaceClaim line of 3D visualization tools. This was a good strategic move as it allowed the company to retain control of both AutoCAD and the SpaceClaim line. On July 19, 2010, Autodesk purchased the SolidWorks CAD software company. On March 16, 2013, Autodesk, Inc. (ADSK) announced that it has agreed to acquire Esri, Inc. for US$3.8 billion. Esri had developed the AutoCAD software for the first time in 1987, three years after Autodesk. Esri is the second largest software company based on revenue. On August 22, 2013, Autodesk acquired the YouView platform developer, Platform Computing. Platform Computing was ca3bfb1094
